Whether the discovery of America by Columbus has been of advantage or loss to the so-called civilized people of the Old World would form an interesting thesis for discussion. When we remember the gentle and refuned races of Mexico and Peru, trampled beneath the gross feet of Fizarro, Cortes and the Inquisition; or regard the savage picturesqueness of the Indian tribes that wandered over the North American continent, cruel, brutal and happy, unregard by and uninjuring Western culture, we cannot but look with some doubt and hesitation at America of to-day, the spotheosis of Philistinism, the perplexity and despair of statesmen, the Mecca to which turns every religious or social charlatan, where the only god worshipped is Mammon, and the highest education is the share list; where political life, which should be the breath of the nostrils of every freeman, is shunned by an honest man as the plague; where, to enrich jobbers and monopolists and contractors, a nation has emancipated its slaves, and enslaved its freemen; where the people is gorged and drunk with materialism, and where wealth has become a curse instead of a blessing. ible,

Another English characteristic, strongly developed and even protesouely caricatured.

Another English characteristic, strongly developed and even grotesquely caricatured in America, is the love of big things, which is, after all, a failing akin to virtue, and which will guide America into fair pastures when adversity and Mr. Matthew Arnold shall have chustened and purified Philistia. At present Americans are satisfied with things because they are large; and if not large they must have cost a great deal of money. One evening, at the Madison Square theatre, an American observed to me: "That is the most expensive dropscene in the world." It was a glorified curtain of embroidery, with agolden crane and a fairy landscape, and might figusly have been claimed as the most beautiful drop-scene in the world, but this was not the primary idea in the Yankee mind.

This theatre is said to be the largest in the world, and was built by wealthy New Yorkers who were unable to buy boyes at the original Opera House, as their proprietors did not think fit to die or vacateas quietly as the aspirants made money. The result has been the present house, in which may be nightly seen the miserable and understand the propension of the propension

AMERICAN FEMALE BEAUTY. Admiration of feminine beauty is characteristic of Americans, and as most of us are too poor to go abroad we have formed a habit of admiring the ladies of our own country. Whether the following ruthless expeure of our illusion will, not stimulate emigration to the Mother Country may well be doubted:

emigration to the Mother Country may well be doubted:

There can be no doubt that Americans honestly believe their women to be the most beautiful in the world; nor to them would there appear any extravagance in the remark of the New York Sun on the audience which attended Irving's first performance, "in respect of the beauty it contained far surpassing any audience that Mr. Irving ever bowed to in his life." But the opinion of foreigners—I do not speak of Englishmen alone—Is very different; and I have never met one who had fived long or travelled much in America who did not hold that female beauty in the States is extremely rare, while the average of ordinary good looks is unusually low. More pretty faces are to be seen in a single day in London than in a month in the States. The average of beauty is far higher in Canada, and the American town in which most pretty women are noticeable is Detroit, on the Canadian.

Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston, it is to be chiefly found. In New York, in August, I bardlysaw a face while cauld be called pretty. Even at Saratopa, the most attractive face seemed that of a young English lady passing through on her way to Australia. In November, New York presented a different appearance, and many pretty women were to be seen, although the number was comparatively small, and at the Metropolitan Opera

CHIEF JUSTICE COLERIDGE.

But this dyspeptic nobleman does not confine himself to criticisms of American institutions. He takes a whack at any head he sees. The Chief-Justice of England conces in for a small does as follows:

It may be questioned whether it was altogether consistent with the dignity of the Chief-Justice of England to be carried about America like Barnum's "Greatest Show on Earth," as an advertisement of the glory of that remarkable country. Better the dinner of herbs with freedom, than terrapin and canvas-back ducks with service. And it must be admitted that a full expression of opinion and indugence of the critical or judicial spirit were ime glass of beer or a milk punch, which would for the time invigorate and relieve my After awhile the stimulants commen

If a physician is suffering be invariably calls another physician to prescribe for him, #s he cannot see himself as he see others; so I called a physician and he advised me to tree. A Chief Juatice should only speak from the bench, where his words carry the force and weight which is rightly accorded to deliberate judgment, whelly formed and temperately expressed. His language should be judicial or he should be silent. Now, whatever may have been the merits or charm of Lord Coleridge's American utterances, no one will be disposed to call them them judicial. His praise of many things American may be fairly held extravagant; while, if the press be correct, he even attempted to socially whitewash General Butter, Governor of Massachusetts, the most unscrapulous and indecent of demnagues, whose defeat during the late elections has delighted all honest men, whether Republicans or Democrats. His ungrudging praise of the judiciary of the United States altogether ignored the fact that a considerable proportion of that body, elected by the same processes us give minicipal government to the clitica, is notoricusly inclined and corrupt, and that the criminal classes, who are personally most interested in the verdicts of the courts, select the judges to preside in the werdicts of the courts, select the judges to preside in the werdicts of the courts, select the judges to preside in them.

MATTHEW ARNOLD.

In this condition I passed nearly a year, wholly unfit for businese, while the effort to think was irkeome and painful. My blood became impoverished, and I suffered from incapacity with an appalling sense of misery and general apprehension of coming evil. I passed sleepless nights and was troubled with irregular action of the heart, a constantly feverish condition and the most excruciating tortures in my stomach, living for days on rice water and gruel, and, indeed, the digestive functions seemed all other symptoms of stomach and digest-ive disorders. It is overwhelmingly super-rior to the tonics, bitters, and dyspepsion curses of the day, and is certain to be so acknowledged by the public universally. Thousands of people to-day are going to premature graves with these serious dis-cases, that I have above described, and to easer, that I have above described, and to all such I would say: "Do not let your good judgment be governed by your prijudices, but give the above named remedy a fair and patient riad, and i believeyou will not only be rewarded by perfect restoration to health, but you will alarbe convinced that the medical profession does not possess all the knowledge three is embraced in medical general."
